Ladurée

The story of Parisian tea rooms is intimately linked to the Ladurée family story. It all started in 1862, when Louis Ernest Ladurée, a man from the South West, miller by trade, created a bakery at 16 rue Royal in Paris.

In 1871, while the Baron Haussman was giving a new aspect to Paris, a fire led to the conversion of the bakery into a cake shop.

Jules Cheret, the famous poster designer of the end of the century was in charge of the decoration of the cake shop. He was inspired by the pictorial techniques used for the ceilings of the Sistine Chapel and the Opera Garnier.

At the time of the Second Empire, with the development of Parisian cafés, Jeanne Souchard, Ernest Ladurée's wife, daughter of a famous hotel-keeper in Rouen, had the idea to mix style : the café and the cake shop therefore gave birth to one of the first Parisian tearooms. They had one advantage over the cafés : women were welcome and free to come at any time.

A place with such refined atmosphere and rich historical background attracted David Holder and his father Francis Holder, founder of the Holder group. They both decided to repurchase the famous House then to upgrade and extend it.
